A special despatch from Chee-Foo con firms the report that the Japanese fleet attacked the Chinese fleet at Wel-Hal-Wel yesterday morning; that it was repulsed at one entrance of the harbor, and subsequently attacked the other er

The despatch says that the Japanese made a daring attempt to capture the forts and arsenal at Wel-Hal-Wel, Four cruisers and several smaller vessels led the Japanese advance. The first shots were exchanged at daylight.

The Japanese apparently expected to take the Chinese by surprise, while the latter's warships were away, as the Chinese squadron, with the exception of some small gunboats and torpedo vessels, sailed the day before for another

But the gunboats and forts kept up such a well-directed fire that the Japan ese were unable to enter the harbor. The Chinese torpedo boats were then ordered to advance, and when they did so the Japanese fleet retired.

Later, the same fleet of Japanese ves sels began an attack upon the other entrance of the harbor. The result of this second attack was another repulse.

LONDON, August 11 .- The Government has received a despatch confirming the announcements of further fightthe between the Chinese and Japanese The Government advices stated that the Japanese were making an attack upon the important naval station at Wei-Hal Wel, but no details were given.

The reported attack upon Port Ham "Hton is regarded here as to undoubtedly Daval port facing Wel-Hai-Wel.

that Mrs. Apisdorf picked up the bottle again after she threw it. Besides, I think this woman is really the aggressor, and ought to be punished. She has no right to go to the coffee saloon, and if she goes there again I will place her under bonds to keep the peace.

As to the Justice's statement that the evidence showed that Mrs. Apisdorf had picked up the bottle again after the alleged throwing, the Justice was missinformed. On the contrary, the evidence of the accused themselves showed that such an act was a physical impossibility, as the sister-in-law chained that immediately after the alleged throwing she put Mrs. Apisdorf having ben put out by her stater-in-law, who insisted that she did so single-handed, it may be observed that Mrs. Apisdorf having been put out by her stater-in-law, and that she and accused, weighs nearly twice as much as her sister-in-law, and that she later.

He did not know what the conferrees felt on this subject, whether they believed the bill would naturally remain in the Senate. In case a disagreement was reported But in any event, it was of vital importance to fix the status of the bill in the event of a disagreement. Senator Gray said he doubted the propriety of the amendment. To quote a favorite phrase of the New York Senator, it was not necessary to cross a

Mr. Turple said he believed in Demo crats who were such with or withou the income tax. He reviewed the growth of the Democratic party, and said he was confident that in its present trial it would be triumphant. "It is the duty of the tariff conferrees to agree not to disagree," said Mr. Turple, with vigor, there now," said Mr. Cockrell, with such "and that being their duty, I believ is predestined that they must, they shall agree."

He said it would be a great historic sin if these conferrees disagreed. He closed with this proposition: "The time has now come, and I now propose that the Senate conferrees should present their resignations to this body. They have falled Supreme Court by Miss Fannie E. How. to agree. They have served honorably, and, formerly of this city, but now live nonly. But they have failed to agree. There they stop; there they stand. Why should they not welcome relief? Let them give way to others."

The Senators had given the closest attention to the latter part of Mr. Turpie's speech, and his startling proposition that the conferrees resign sent a the White House now, it will be there buzz of comment over the chamber and

Mr. White (Dem., Cal.) followed Mr. Turple. He said that so far as the parliamentary situation was concerned he was not prepared to discuss it. He could find nothing to bear upon the subject "in the silurian epigrams miscalled the rules of the Senate." He then discussed the resolution and what would result from it-the discharge of the Senate conferrees. The resolution indicated lack of confidence in the conferrees Mr. White said the passing of the Hill resolution would mean the death of tariff legislation. Mr. Cockrell, at 1.15, moved an executive session.

Mr. Hill demanded the year and nays. During the roll-call the most significant vote was that of Allen against an executive session and Caffrey voting in its favor.

Mr. Cockrell's motion prevailed, and at-2.01 P. M. the Senate went into executive session. The vote stood a tie, 25-35.

President Stevenson then voted aye. Mr. Cockrell's motion was made to gain time, and was in the interests of the Tariff bill and in opposition to Hill. The detailed vote on the motion for an executive session was as follows: Year-Bate, Berry, Blackburn, Blanchard, Brice, Caffery, Call, Camden, Cockrell, Coke, Brico, Caffery, Call, Camden, Cockrell, Coke, Faulkner, George, Gibson, Gordon, Gorman, Gray, Harris, Jarvis, Jones (Ark.), Liudasy, McLaurin, Marito, Mills, Mitchell (Wis.), Palmer, Pasco, Pugh, Ransou, Roach, Smith, Turpie, Vent, Vilas, Weish and White. Total, 28, Nays.—Aldrich, Allen, Allien, Carey, Chandler, Cullom, Pavis, Dixon, Dolph, Dubois, Frys. Gailinger, Hale, Hansbrough, Hawley, Higgins, Hill, Hoar, Jones (Nev.), Kyle, Lodge, McMillan, Manderson, Mitchell (Oregon), Murphy, Patton, Peffer, Perkins, Pettigrew, Power, Proctor, Sherman, Shour, Teller and Washburn.
